'WISCONSIN PLAN" FOR MEDIATION

Proposes More Attention to Keeping Peace Than to Arranging Ways in Which War Should Be Carried On.

Worcester, Mass., Dec. 18.—The "Wisconsin plan," described as a conference of neutrals for continuous mediation, was explained by Professor Emily G. Balch ship; special musical service. Sunday school at noon. Young People's meeting of Wellesley college at the Clark unitat 7:30. All cordially welcome, versity conference on "The Problems and versity conference on "The Problems and Lessons of the War," to-day. Professor Balch, who was a delegate to the recent International Congress of Women at The Hague, declared that too much time had been spent, at Hague congresses and elsewhere, in arranging the ways in which war should be carried on.

"The time that has been spent in haggling over dum-dum bullets and legislating that bombs solely for the dispersion of asphyziating gases should be illegitimate, but that bombs for the diffusion of asphyxiating gases plus missiles should be legitimate, might have been better employed," she said. "Let u- not call together a new conference to arrange how to make war tolerable. Let us get rid of the idea that if war is only properly regulated and politely conducted it is all right.

"A conference of neutrals laying down and insisting on their own grievances and claims would be, by that very fact, spoiled for mediatory functions or for onciliation.

Professor Balch said that the sponsors of the "Wisconsin plan" argued that hu-manity should be able to find some methd of avoiding prolonged destruction and that the only way was to adopt the device of placing simultaneous conditional proposals before the belligerents; that to place sane standing proposals before the nations would tend to ripen the time for peace, and that there ought to be a commission of experts sitting throughout the war and in some way holding the possibilities of settlement before the belligerents. She said that the advocates the plan believed that this would open the possibility of establishing the begin-ning of world federation.
